Review

“This is a most impressive collection, confirming Böll’s standing as one of the best writers of our time. It would form an admirable introduction to his work for those who don’t yet know it. It is the work of affirmation, for it proclaims the values of humanity and the unquenchable vitality of the spirit.”

—The Scotsman

About the Author

In 1972, Heinrich Böll became the first German to win the Nobel Prize for literature since Thomas Mann in 1929. Born in Cologne, in 1917, Böll was reared in a liberal Catholic, pacifist family. Drafted into the Wehrmacht, he served on the Russian and French fronts and was wounded four times before he found himself in an American prison camp. After the war he enrolled at the University of Cologne, but dropped out to write about his shattering experiences as a soldier. His first novel, The Train Was on Time, was published in 1949, and he went on to become one of the most prolific and important of post-war German writers. His best-known novels include Billiards at Half-Past Nine (1959), The Clown (1963), Group Portrait with Lady (1971), and The Safety Net (1979). In 1981 he published a memoir, What’s to Become of the Boy? or: Something to Do with Books. Böll served for several years as the president of International P.E.N. and was a leading defender of the intellectual freedom of writers throughout the world. He died in June 1985.

Marvellous book.

By Ashok Mansharamani

Such a delightful author. His subjects are introspective, human, very human. His description of the reality of war dealing with people, monstrous - awed by the third reich, the ordinary soldier sensing the futility of battle, constantly questioning if there is anything heroic or even patriotic about war. Wonderfully constructed stories. I'm happy to have read this splendid book. I recommend it very highly

Understanding the Post World War mind of a European

By Arizona

The tone in many of the stories depicts a person trying to sort through his life after World War II. The author was a survivor, and he wanders from episode to episode seeing the lives that people find after the devastation and shock of the war. I can see that the Nobel Prize that Heinrich Boll was awarded was well deserved.
